

Summer is a time for family, friends and fun – and memorable vacations, brought to you in part by quality federal public services.

Quality public services

- Allow us to enjoy the natural beauty of our parks, visit first-rate museums and art galleries and time-travel at historic sites.
- Protect our environment now and for future generations, and preserve our plant and wildlife so they can thrive.
- Help ensure travel safety and security by enforcing regulations on land, air and sea.

But that's not all. No matter what the season – summer, fall, winter or spring – quality public services deliver quality of life. They help keep us safe, healthy and secure.

Quality public services ensure food and drug safety through inspection, approval and regulation. They prevent the import of plants and animals that could introduce disease.

They provide pensions for seniors and benefits to help those who are ill, poor, unemployed or have a disability.

They safeguard our rights, and promote inclusion and equality for everyone.

They're a HOT priority

Without public services, our lives would be radically different. We wouldn't enjoy the social and economic well-being we have now. We would not have the just and equitable society we strive for.

It's important to protect and improve our public services. It's also critical to restore those that have been cut – women's programs, child care, programs that provided access to equality and protect our environment, and more.

Public services are ours. We all pay for them. We have the final say.
Don't let anyone take them away!
